Chic digs and festivals in Oslo

In Oslo, August is festival season, with the focus on music (from 8 to 12 August there's Oya, for rock, pop and electronica: Devo headlines this year's line-up) to Oslo Jazz (from 13 to 19 August; the full line-up is here). Sommerro made waves when it opened here last summer – a historic bathing house and 231-room hotel, remade as one of the city's chicest stays. The same team has just opened Villa Inkognito, right next door.

The patrician 1870 building has been restored as a sumptuous 11-suite private villa, with multiple sitting rooms, and snugs, dining and meetings rooms, bar and open kitchen, and an ultra-modern gym tucked neatly into its subterranean space. Guests have access to Sommerro's attractions and amenities (the famous public baths, rooftop pool, restored theatre and half-a-dozen restaurants). When Inkognito is not bought out by families or groups, rooms can be booked individually. sommerrohouse.com, from £455
