5 Pet-Friendly Hotels In Asia That Will Treat Your Dog Like Royalty

There's no better way to show your appreciation on International Dog Day than to treat your furry one with a luxurious getaway

As King Frederick of Prussia once said in 1789, “dog is man's best friend”—and that statement is still very true today. In fact, for many of us, dogs are part of our families, a companion through good times and tough times.

So it goes without saying that these beautiful creatures deserve their own special day, in the form of International Dog Day today. Show your appreciation for your pet with a cake (for dogs, of course), a new toy, or better yet, take him on a holiday—because to them, it’s your company that matters.

Below, our top picks of luxurious pet-friendly hotels that will give your pooch the five-star treatment it deserves.

The Temple House, Chengdu

The third hotel in China's The House Collective and a member of Preferred Hotels & Resorts, The Temple House in Chengdu is the perfect embodiment of the city's heritage and laid-back culture. Named after the nearby Daci Temple, the hotel is not only pet-friendly—it is also extremely passionate about animal welfare, supporting conservation efforts at Chengdu's Giant Panda Breeding Research Base and organising adoption days with a local dog rescue centre.

At The Temple House, your dog is in good hands—it is free to roam (as long as they are leashed) in the terrace and the cafe, where there are special cushion covers and an organic menu for both dogs and cats. The hotel also organises a Doga Yoga Day from time to time, so you can clock in a work out together.
