

World Traveller

Issue One Hundred and One | September 2016

DHS10

Travel sanctity in Thailand

Beauty, spirit and wellness
upon a luxury island

September 2016 // Issue One Hundred and One // Thailand / Japan / Monaco / Malta

World Traveller

Produced in International Media Production Zone

JAPAN

Ancient culture and neon-lit quirkiness collide, as first impressions get rewritten...

MONACO

From Michelin stars to gleaming supercars: how Monte Carlo sets the tone for fashion and finesse

MALTA

A compact (now classy) feast of pretty cities, ornate heritage and hypnotic waters

Suite Dreams

What:

Golden Gate View Suite

Where:

*Cavallo Point – the Lodge at the Golden Gate,
San Francisco*

About:

At the turn of the last century, Cavallo Point – the Lodge at the Golden Gate served as a home for army personnel, due to its convenient position at the mouth of San Francisco Bay. Now it serves as one of America's most charming hotels, with 74 newly constructed rooms and suites added to the wonderfully characterful rooms that housed the military staff. Among those new is the Golden Gate View Suite, where design highlights include a two-sided fireplace – perfect for those chilly San Francisco dawns. But the star of the show is of course the Golden Gate Bridge, a moniker that sounds a great deal more alluring than International Orange Gate Bridge (how it would be known if its true colour were referenced).

Each day this wonderful suite provides the perfect vantage point to see the iconic landmark gradually reveal its full glory.

Low-hanging fog shrouds the bridge for much of the morning, with just a burst of orange above the clouds offering a tantalising hint of what lies beneath.

Slowly, the fog dissipates and the bridge stands fully exposed, resplendent in the San Francisco sun. An icon of America observed without even having to open your door.

Cavallo Point – the Lodge at the Golden Gate is a member of the Preferred Hotels & Resorts LVX Collection

